

Cornwall Air Ambulance - New Operations Facility near NEWQUAY

WEST COMMS have been working with EIC Ltd since from early September 2011 on this exciting development for a New Operation Facility to base the Cornwall Air Ambulance.

Following a strategic review in 2009, and a move to temporary accommodation following the closure of RAF St Mawgan, there was a need to modernise the front line operations in order to provide an up to date and effective air ambulance service for the people of Cornwall. Although the existing base had served well for over 20 years, emerging statutory requirements to meet new clinical operating standards presented a strong likelihood that prevented continued operations from the old location of temporary portacabins and hardened shelter.

Following a competitive tender process, the charity appointing a principal contractor gave specific assurances that more than 65% of the supply chain for goods and services in this construction project would be locally sourced in Cornwall.

This project has been funded by a European investment grant of £1M. West Comms has secured the communication cabling sub-contract worth in the region of £4K providing Cat6 Structured Cabling and VGA links throughout.
